Diploma in Archaeology

Archaeology is a science which studies human past with the help of material remains. Archaeological material is the most important and authentic source for the reconstruction of History. There are no written records in case of Pre-Historic and Proto-Historic period. In the absence of written records, the archaeological remains prove to be of immense importance. In the early Historical period, where written sources are not available, Archaeology plays a vital role as a source. There are many new techniques which have evolved in recent years in the field of Archaeology. The study of these techniques and various aspects of Archaeology would help in shedding new light on the events of the past.

By keeping in mind, the significant and importance of Archaeology for studying the Prehistoric, Protohistorical and Early Historical cultures and monuments this diploma has been designed. It would equip the student with knowledge and tools of Archaeology in order to understand the distant past properly.
